BITE DUST OF DEFEAT

(Continued from First Page.) it is not the most agreeable under-taking to have to cross sticks with the big dragoon for the full eight chukers of the match. Somewhow a sort of feeling gained ground to-day that Cheane may be smitten with the "rat-tles," but it is a sort of hoping against hope, and anyway it is rather peculiar hope, and anyway it is rather peculiar to think that a little thing like a pole match could unstring the nerve of a cavalryman. During the match last Saturady Cheape spent a lot of time ramming the cotton up his nostrils, and he could be heard at the side line suching as he drove after the ball. FORECAST IS GIVEN OF RATE DECISION

High Authority" Says Long-Haul Roads Will Get Increase, but Short-Haul Roads Denied. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Haul Roads Dealed.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Washington, June 15.—From a source high enough to be authoritative it was learned to-day that the Interstate Commerce Commission in its forthcoming answer to the application of the railroads in Eastern classification territory for a 5 per cent rate increase, will grant a substantial increase to the "long-haul" lines, and will refuse it to the "short-haul" roads.

The theory of this, it is stated, is that an increase in revenue is justified in the case of railroads which are required to move crops and other necessities of life in large quantity from the interior to the seaboard and to the thickly populated section in the East. The increased revenue, it is said, will enable these railroads to provide better equipment, more cars and other facilities for the prompt transportation of commodities over long distances. Furthermore, it was learned that the Interstate Commerce Commission has been more than ever impressed by the opportunities the railroads of the country have for administering their affairs more economically, and that this has largely determined its opinion in regard to the short-haul lines. The refusal of the rate increase to these lines will be accompanied by advice that if they shut off enough of the present waste, they will find that their revenues will be increased sufficiently without a rise in freight rates.

According to the best information obtainable, the opinion of the Interstate Commerce Commission will be given out this week, and it is understood the memorandum prepared by the commission is now in the Government Printing Office.
